FROM THE EDITOR

We were not searching for a particular theme with which to inaugurate the Journal's 21st year of publication. But as it turned out one supplied itself, what with articles on the Big Sur photography case, MJ-12 and Leonard Stringfield's continuing collection of crash-retrieval stories. That theme, of course, to paraphrase past pundits in a different context, can be expressed as "What did the President know, and when did he know it?" How involved is the government with alleged UFO data? And who orchestrates the coverup, if there is one, anyway? Naturally, we don't guarantee any firm answers to those questions; but we do feel we supply the material that may eventually aid in making up your mind about the matter. What we do guarantee is a continually improving UFO journal.

In the meantime, we wish everyone the best for the New Year.
